

Abstract :

A journey into the allegorical roots of astrological Christianity

How it all began :

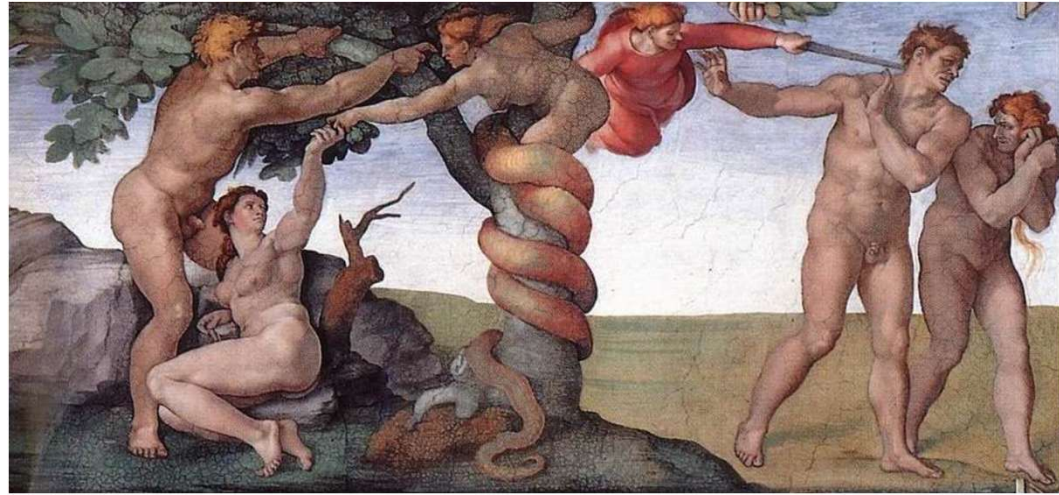

Venus was the Star of Bethlehem at the time of Jesus' birth. In literature, he was followed by 12 wise star-readers and dream interpreters from Mesopotamia. The archaeoastronomer Dieter Koch describes this convincingly; his account is compelling. Jesus certainly had a horoscope too – just like us, the children of the 'sun god'!

The Garden of Eden in the Epic of Gilgamesh belongs to the goddess Ishtar, whose planet is Venus. It was only later that Yahweh claimed it for himself. The apple that Lilith, the wind spirit who seduces men, shows to Eve is the goddess's symbolic fruit. If you cut it in half, the core appears in the shape of a five-pointed pentagram, which the planet Venus also traces across the sky every 7 years. If you add $5 + 7$, you get the number of those pesky (12-)13 lunar cycles in the 12-month calendar year. These were all numbers sacred to nature, with which the Mesopotamian magicians in Bethlehem were also familiar.

With Jesus' birth under the star Venus, the symbol of a man who understood both men and women was born. Did Hellenistic Bible writers (from Alexandria?) hope that, following his allegorical 'flight' to liberal Egypt, the spirit of this new era would spread as far as Judea and Rome? After all, an equally cosmic turning point had been predicted at that time by Babylon. The heroic Age of Aries came to an end, and the altruistic, suffering 'fairy-tale' Age of Pisces began.

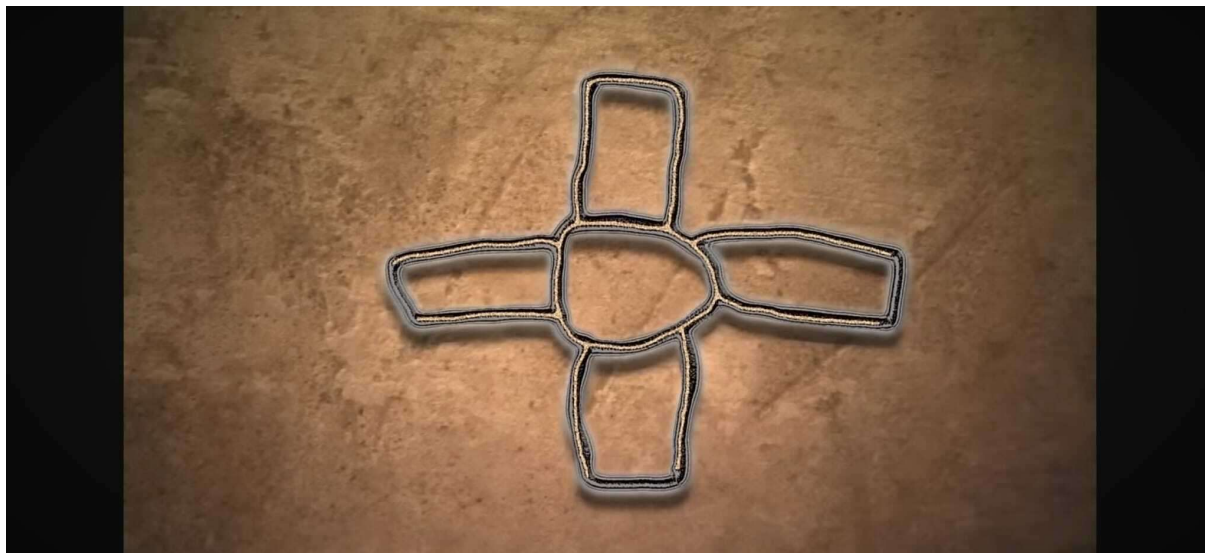

With Jesus' birth under the star Venus, the symbol of 'On earth as it is in heaven' came to life. The divine planetary psyche is incarnated in humankind. The mystery of Jesus' birth applies to you and me too

Leonardo da Vinci perfectly recognised the allegorical setting of the Last Supper in Mark 14, verses 12–13: it need not be Jerusalem. Any place where the cosmic human spirit of the Water-Bearer (Aquarius) takes up residence is precisely the place you can follow! The spirit of Aquarius is the head of this cosmic cross, the symbol of the evangelist Matthew with the Christmas story as well. <https://astrologischesabendmahl.de/leonardo-da-vincis-abendmahls-geheimnis.html>

The remaining symbols of the Evangelists complete the astrologically 'fixed' cross:
Aquarius, Leo, Taurus and the Eagle/Scorpio.

In his video Uncovering the First Cross *), reporter Simcha Jacobovici documents, from the 5-minute mark onwards, what may be the oldest Christian cross symbol, dating from the 1st century. It was discovered during the excavation of an early place of worship (the site of the First Supper?) in Bethsaida, near Jerusalem.
